MAJOR CASE 65

EVIDENCE RESPONSE TEAM (ERT) MATTERS;
OLYMPIC RELATED DUTIES;

Synopsis: To confirm ERT personnel will be assigned to the 8th Floor Command Center and Forward Command Posts during tactical and non-tactical situations should any occur during the Olympics; and (2) that the paper flow within the CC and FCP be modified to insure ERT personnel review all Information Control Forms generated at those locations. In addition, to insure that security is provided at any and all locations where ERT has been directed to process the scene.

Details: The recent Olympic Charlie Exercised was the first opportunity for an ERT member to be present in a FCP. This occurred at the Peachtree (non-tactical) site and at the Gainesville (tactical) site. In both situations, the ERT gained valuable insight into the operations of the FCP. Previously, the ERT was represented by the Investigative Desk at the FCP.

During both the Peachtree and Gainesville scenario, the Intelligence and Investigative Desks were focused primarily on identifying and locating the subjects and the safety of hostages or other innocent parties. The benefit of having an ERT member present in the FCP was that this individual was in a position to anticipate the needs of the ERT that would be responding to the various scenes to collect evidence. In the Peachtree City scenario, this included notifying the ERT of the Hazard Material situation so they could insure they had the proper clothing.

To: Atlanta From: SA [REDACTED]
Re: 185B-AT-61969, 05/01/1996

b6

Each of these scenarios quickly developed multiple sites that required searches be conducted, many requiring the ERTs. During rapidly developing situations involving multiple sites, it may become necessary to deploy more than one ERT. If that becomes necessary it will be critical to coordinate their movement and monitor their progress. This would be done by the ERT member in the CC as the result of contact with the ERT representative in the FCPs. The ERT member in the CC, through the FCP, would also secure any additional resources the ERT at the scene may need.

Based on the experience gained during the exercise, this writer spoke to ASAC [REDACTED] regarding the inclusion of an ERT member at both the CC and the FCP. ASAC [REDACTED] concurred that there should be an ERT presence at the CC and FCP.

During the Peachtree scenario, ASAC [REDACTED] and this writer discussed ERTs position in the flow of intelligence and investigative paperwork at the FCP. ASAC [REDACTED] stated the ERT member would have access to the Information Control form after it had been reviewed by the Investigative Desk and prior to it being loaded into the Rapid Start system. This would allow the ERT member to review the information, being sensitive to developing situations that would require an ERT presence and any special ERT material or equipment. This would alert the ERT as to whether any special action was necessary prior to arriving at the scene.

The ERT was not an active participant at any of the crime scenes in any of the Olympic Charlie scenarios. As a result, when SWAT and HRT finished there phase of the exercise they were released by the CC or FCP. In an actual event, it will be necessary to insure that any crime scene is protected and secured not only prior to the arrival of the ERT, but while the ERT is processing the scene. Therefore, the HRT and/or SWAT should not be released unless other law enforcement personnel have been designated to secure the site and provide continuing security for the ERT.

It is recommended that the Tactical and Investigative Desk Supervisors be advised that if ERT presence is required at a hostage site, prior to releasing either the HRT or SWAT from that site, that law enforcement personnel have been designated to provide security of the crime scene and that the security will be maintained while ERT is processing the scene. In the event the scene must be secured overnight, the ERT would advise the CC or FCP and request appropriate security be provided.

Details: SAs [redacted] and [redacted] attended Exercise Olympic Charlie, a crisis management exercise held in the Atlanta Division during April 16-18, 1996, which involved scenarios concerning hijacking and hostage taking situations. - (1) Most tactical situations result in crime scene situations.
- (2) The transition from tactical to crime scene responsibility is crucial.
- (3) Tactical personnel should be made aware of ERT concerns and should not walk away from a scene until it is secured and turned over to ERT personnel for proper photographing and processing of any evidence. This includes keeping the media out of the scene as well.

(4) Evidence Response Teams will need up to date information regarding events as they occur so they will know what crime scene investigators are looking to document, such as:

(A) Were shots fired? Who fired them? What direction?

(B) In a hostage situation, were assaults committed in any particular location? ERT personnel will focus their search for trace evidence to locations such as these.

(C) If there is blood at the scene, whose is it? We may need blood samples from all law enforcement, subjects, and victims whose blood may be present.

(D) What hazards remain at the scene which may harm ERT personnel such as explosive devices or chemical weapons?

(E) Weapons fired by law enforcement personnel must be collected for test firing and comparison matching of bullets and casings.

(F) A suggestion was made to videotape the crime scene immediately and make this available to any media or other personnel who need to see the crime scene right away.

(G) Consider whether clothing of any of the participants needs to be collected for blood, trace evidence comparison, or other evidentiary concerns.

(H) Photograph wounds right away and send personnel to the hospital or morgue to recover bullets.

(I) Tactical situations which develop and move from place to place may leave many crime scenes to be processed.

Unit Chief [REDACTED] Evidence Response Team Unit, advised that special funds are available from ERTU for equipment to be used during the 1996 Olympics. Evidence Response Teams from Chicago, San Francisco, Miami, Boston, Mobile, and Columbia who will be assisting Atlanta during the 1996 Olympics drafted lists of suggested equipment they will need during this period. Birmingham will utilize these lists and a review of its own inventory to ensure that Birmingham ERT equipment is complete. It is noted that no outside Evidence Response Teams will be present at Birmingham during the 1996 Olympics; however, Mobile and Columbia are on standby for any location they are needed.
